The news for some days previous had in some degree prepared us for the sweepelements in Virginia in the State election Tuesday. Wells is the incumbent Governor and is a Radical Republican. Gilbert C. Walker professes to be a Conservative Republican, but the Republican part should undoubtedly be left off, seeing that he was a prominent Democratic politician, and the President of a 'Democratic Club' in 1864. He claims to be a supporter of Grant's policy and some of his friends have had assurance enough to telegraph the President their congratulations on Mr. Walker's election and the success of his (Grant's) policy. It looks like the administration had quietly encouraged Walker's election; though at this dis-ance it is hard to tell. Whatever professions are made by the Republican supporters of Mr. nominated a good man, (for emphatically in our judgment Wells was not one—he was essentially a rascal and intriguer, who was aiming at his own promotion to the Senate;) if they had discarded the untenable idea of still keeping the great body of the white cally in our judgment Wells was not people out of their way by the ironclad oath, they ought to have succeeded. But they were unable to get out warm professions of a purpose to give a Wells man, in this district; Booker, the reconstruction policy of the administration a sincere support. If they do district; Norton, colored, in the York district, and McKinzie, in the Alexanthis, they may call themselves what they please. We may be sure there will be no exhibition of the cloven foot till whites everywhere have polled nearly when it does take place.

A New Political Move-Mr. Boutwell

Telegram to the Cincinnatt Commercial, WASHINGTON, July 6. A prominent national politician, who A prominent national pointeran, who figured extensively, about a year ago, as a Chase man, is here, working upon Mr. Boutwell for the Presidency. In an interview with your correspondent, he related some facts about the success of the provincent for the save. of the movement, so far. He says shortly after Mr. Boutwell became Se cretary of the Treasury, a plan was formed, and the machinery put in mo-tion to make him the next President of the United States. The organization is now complete and in full working While Mr. Boutwell was attending While Mr. Bottwell was attending the Peace Jubilee in Boston, some of the papers in Massachusetts spoke out plainly upon the subject. The most prudent players in this great political game, such as Mr. Tullock, Appointment Clerk in the Treasury Department, thought the public demonstration by the press in Massachusetts was premature, and silence was commend It was generally understood that Pres ident Grant has turned over the administration of the Government to his Cabinet, and that he takes little or no interest in what is going on. His influ-ence with his Cabinet Ministers is daily becoming less, while their power over him is daily becoming stronger. If General Grant is now a candidate for General Grant is now a candidate for re-election, he very soon will not be one. His influence and his mantle will quietly and gently fall upon Mr. Boutwell, whose wise and statesmanlike administration of the Treasury has given entire satisfaction to all the solid moneyed men of the country.

this extensive political enterprise, is a great organizer, and every appoint-ment which he makes has this end in view, from the messenger to the col-lector. Mr. Delano, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, is his Lieutenant General, and moves with unerring judgment to accomplish the result. Mr. Boutwell has taken time by the forelock, and in this he is right, as it renders his success more certain. His friends are confident, and well they may be, with his active, keen, watchful and untiring officials located every few miles square throughout the country, with full power to control the Presidential Nominating Convention. Nothing but some unlooked for overwhelming Mr. Boutwell has taken time by the but some unlooked for overwhelming disaster can prevent his becoming the next President. His friends are increasing daily, and will soon be as thick as autumnal leaves. Mr. Boutwell and his friends are elated at the indifference of General Grant, and of the certainty of having his aid and powerful co-operation, knowing as they do, that any rivalry in the Administration for the succession will certainty make it a fallure, if not a to-operation will containly make it a fallure, if not a to-operation will certainly make it a fallure, if not a to-operation will certainly make it a fallure, if not a to-operation will certainly make it a fallure in the two counties some thirty votes.

THE STATE GOES CONSERVATIVE.

RICHMOND, July 6. The election passed off quietly. After night-fall the streets resounded with cheers for Walker and victory in the State.
